to the physical and mental health of each person enumerated, whether active or disabled, crippled, bedridden, deaf, dumb, blind, insane or idiotic."

The present act, relative to the eleventh census, is most explicit with reference to the appointment and duties of enumerators. They are now specially appointed officers, and no so as to secure a perfect fit at every point. Gloves of the proper size need no stretcher. Choose gloves the fingers of which correspond with your own in length, work in the fingers first, then the thumb, and finally smooth them down until they fit every part. A glove that fits well generally wears well.

The President selects the Superintendent of Census, who recommends to the Secretary of the Interior and through him to the President, as many Supervisors of Census as he considers necessary. These, in turn, employ their enumerators, with the consent of the Superintendent of Census. What the enumerators have to do is by this time pretty well known.

In regard to the INQUIRIES CONCERNING MORTGAGES, about which so much has been said of late, Congressman Cox spoke as follows on July 11, 1888: "It will be observed by the House that the committee desires full information in reference to the indebtedness of the country; not merely the indebtedness of States and city cruslers will be 60 feet longer than the Blake—that is 435 feet long, adding 50 feet amidships to be utilized for coals. When the new programme is completed the British navy will be larger than it has been since 1815, possessing 375 cruisers. This seems a large number of ships, but it must be remembered that the range of Great Britain's mercantile marine tonnage is 1,900,000 tons.

municipalities, but of the people. No more important result of a census, if we must go outside of the stated subjects, can be recommended than this; and we have endeavored to do it by the cheapest mode. It is indispensable for a correct understanding of the condition of the people, as well as for the prosperity of business. It may be said that the States, through their statistical bureaus, world put together, and that for every ship of war having fourteen knots' speed now in the British navy there are 113 ships to protect.

may obtain this information. Many of the States have undertaken it in part. I notice this in the recent return of Mr. Heath, Commissioner of Labor for the State of Michigan, to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for us all. Michigan is a sample of what could be done in other States, and of what may be done by the Federal Government. Michigan is an agricultural State. As the prosperity of the prosperity of the farmer, whatever the source of the trouble. The farmer must depend upon the business of the merchant, the manufacturer and the laborer. When he is prosperous all kinds of business are remunerative. In Michigan only 58-100ths per cent of all the farms were reported. Their valuation was nearly $200,000,000. The mortgage assessed valuation. The rate of interest was 7.22 per cent, which was $2,701,600 in interest annually. The commissioner estimates all the farms in the State, on the basis of the reports, at an assessed valuation of $335,000,000, and the mortgage indebtedness of $64,080,000, with an annual interest of nearly $5,000,000 on farms alone! This is a startling exhibit. Near-

State—a Western State—burdened with mortgage! One can readily see from this where the large percentage of the surplus products of the farm is expended, and yet this does not represent the full indebtedness, for there are debts unsecured to double that amount, and this is but a counterpart of what exists in other States. It represents the legislation upon its bit caution. Unless crops and prices are better the farmer is destined to cruel disappointment. Can there be any greater utility of legislation than that which would collect these data with a view to adjust more equitably the liabilities, duties and rights of all classes in the matter of public burdens, individual indebtedness and tax-

As with everything else the census has to be COMICAL AS WELL AS ITS SERIOUS SIDE. People have not yet forgotten the inquiry concerning "cards" in the Massachusetts census of 1870. Some persons took them to mean visiting cards, some wool or animal cards, and some were shocked by thinking of cards as playing cards. The census taker, who has given permission to refer to the them, told me that he had been putting up and tearing out money for different treatments, although you are not yet cured so one has paid back your money. Do not waste any more money until you try us. Old chronic, deep seated cases cured in 30 to 90 days. Investigate our scandalous treatment. We will send you our names and addresses of those we have cured. Who have given permission to refer to the them.

children of 1970, children born in June or that year were enumerated as less than a year old, or the enumerators forgot that June, 1969, was the June to be taken. These babies were called June bugs. In the same census, the old men were put down as having died of cholera, infanticide, or similar affairs were made in the schedules. It is to be hoped that the census of 1990 will know better.

GREAT JUNE CLEARANCE SALE

For 1890.

Our Out-of-Town Patrons:

This is the last chance you'll have to take advantage of our June Sale for 1890. We've made unusual sweeping reductions in all departments. Every reduction is genuine. There is never any misrepresentation at Barr's. Our newspaper bargains are always to be found on our counters, only bear in mind that when, as is often the case, there is only a limited quantity, those who come first get the best, and special bargains seldom last longer than a few days.

The list of bargains we offer you to-day is one of the biggest reductions ever made in the history of the

HE WAS JUSTIFIED.

E. M. Chambers Acquitted of the Charge of Murder.

Dramatic Scenes in the Court-Room on the Return of the Verdict Yesterday Afternoon.

Wild With Joy and Deftening All Reprehensions from the Court the Shouting Spectators Rushed Forward to Embrace the Defendant—Cheer After Cheer Rang Through the Ironed Court-House—An Unparalleled Scene in a Court of Justice—The Uproar Prevents the Formal Discharge of the Defendant From Custody.

IRONTON, Mo., June 21.

T 3 o'clock this afternoon a hushed and anxious throng of men and women crowded the court-room where E. M. Chambers had been on trial for his life.

Heard heavy steps in the corridor. Every eye was turned toward the door through which the twelve rugged farmers and artisans who held in their hands the fate of the prisoner filed, under escort of the Sheriff.

As they slowly moved toward the box a deep silence fell upon the spectators, not a sound was heard, and the face of each jurymen was eagerly and anxiously scanned, in the hope of gaining from his expression some inkling of what the verdict might be. Though all felt confident it would be acquittal, when the men came doubt took the place of hope. Mr. Chambers was seated near the angle of the railing, a place he had occupied since the beginning of the trial, but for the moment he was completely forgotten, the attention of one and all being concentrated upon the jury with painful intensity. The twelve men took their places and the foreman handed a folded paper containing the verdict to Judge Thomas. So deathlike had the silence become that the slight crumpling of the sheet as the Judge opened it could plainly heard in the remotest corner of the court-room. Judge Thomas ran his eye over the paper, paused a moment, and then in slow, distinct tones read the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty."

For a second the silence continued. The strain had been so great and the expectation so intense that the audience were motionless instantly to take in the full significance of the words uttered. But in another moment a shout burst forth from one and all as the old Court-house had never heard before, and which made the walls and ceiling ring again. Relatives, friends, witnesses, and spectators alike danced and shouted, and were wildly waving their hands, and cheering on the air.

Such a scene of joy has seldom been witnessed in an American court-room. There were many present who were nearly related to the gray-haired defendant, many who had known him for years, and many whose acquaintance with him was limited to what they had seen in the courtroom, but no one could have told from observing the actions of the throng which they were relatives, friends, or merely sympathetic spectators. All were carried away by enthusiasm, and for some moments the court-room was filled with men and women who were positively insane with joy.

THE DEFENDANT.

A moment before, now the man pronounced himself a free man, he was almost danger of being torn to pieces, so eager were his friends—a term including every man, woman and child in the room—to express their sympathy and triumph. The shouts and cries of the throng mingled with the cheering, and the man himself was almost carried away by the wild and almost unbridled enthusiasm of the mob.

ment, and for a time the scene beggared description. Judge Thomas after a few moments endeavored to bring the court-room into something like order, but it would have been as easy to stem Niagara as to check the demonstration of the irrepressible enthusiasm. It was in vain he repeated his desk for order, but his stern rebuke looked like a puff of wind against a storm.

A sound of the rapport reached the ears of the throng. No one paid the slightest attention to him as the sound of his gavel was as completely lost.

IN THE TUMULT.

As the report of a child's popgun amidst the roar of a pitched battle. Finally, recognizing the court-room into something like order, but it would have been as easy to stem Niagara as to check the demonstration of the irrepressible enthusiasm. It was in vain he repeated his desk for order, but his stern rebuke looked like a puff of wind against a storm.

A sound of the rapport reached the ears of the throng. No one paid the slightest attention to him as the sound of his gavel was as completely lost.

Special Correspondence of SUNDAY-POST-DISPATCH.

LAWRENCE, Kan., June 20.—Since the landing of Columbus on the inhospitable shores of the New World, which he found peopled with strange copper-colored beings, fierce and warlike in nature, inhabiting tents of skin and living by the hunt, the Indian question has been a vexing problem, difficult of solution, and there have not been wanting those who have said that it never would be solved until the last one was "wiped from the face of the earth."

This sweeping assertion, however, had not strength of numbers to support its theory, and though 400 years have passed since the troubled question began to be agitated the Indian lacks a good many thousands of being "wiped from the face of the earth," and each year the necessity or bare excuse for such a sentiment to be expressed is growing fainter and fainter, and the Indian problem, if wisely adjusted by a beneficent government, will solve itself.

A great many years ago a man named Pope wrote of the red men in a tenderly commiserating manner which to-day inclines one to laugh:

To the poor Indian, whose untutored mind, sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind, his soul proud science never taught to stray far from the solar walk or Milky way.

This tender sentiment will hardly answer for any of the tribes of the present day, no matter how applicable it may have been then, for the Indians are no longer poor, their own thrift and the government have enriched them greatly; they do not now find their own in the elements, and they are taught—those of them who are capable of being instructed—pretty much the same as their white brothers.

The ancient East where the frontier faded out long ago can but rarely be traced at the border of to-day, where the Indian question is intensely and sometimes terribly practical. Hence the birth of the Atlantic slope, of so many visionary and sentimental and esthetic theories concerning the Indians—or rather the Indians of the Fenimore Cooper pattern—are only legends and traditions in the West, where the Indian is the "good die young," and Cooper's Indians were above the average of the world in respect to their departed early. The Western Indian is a creature of the earth, earthy. Even Jefferson realized that the Indian's capacity could be permanently kept in bounds when he said: "The most economical as well as most honest conduct toward them is to bribe them into peace, and retain them in peace by eternal bribes."

This policy would have proved a costly one by this time; yet Gen. Custer was as far from it in the application of it as he was in his conviction, based upon an intimate and thorough analysis of the habits and character and native instincts of the Indian, and strengthened and supported by the almost unanimous opinion of all persons who have made the Indian problem a study, and have studied it, not from a distance, but in immediate contact with the Indians. The Indian is a creature of the earth, earthy, and it is to that great level where he can be elevated to that of a citizen, or at least to that of a man, that we must look for his future. The Indian is a creature of the earth, earthy, and it is to that great level where he can be elevated to that of a citizen, or at least to that of a man, that we must look for his future.

Gen. Custer's realization that the Indian's capacity could be permanently kept in bounds when he said: "The most economical as well as most honest conduct toward them is to bribe them into peace, and retain them in peace by eternal bribes."

Commissary Walker once made the statement that "the principle of excluding Indians from white, and of excluding white from Indian, is established by an overwhelming preponderance of testimony." A writer in answer to erations. To one who has studied this question in all its bearings and visited the Indian in his reservation, among his own people, this seems the most feasible plan.

Bancroft, in his treatise on the "North American Indians," says: "All the tribes south of the St. Lawrence, except the remotest of the Northwest and the Northwest, cultivated the earth. Unlike the people of the Old World, they were at once hunters and tillers of the soil, and the Indians of the Northwest, relying almost entirely on their own resources, they have never cost the government any considerable amount, and as they are educating their children, there is no reason to doubt that they will in time become useful citizens.

The Navajos, located in the northwestern corner of New Mexico and partly in Arizona, on the reservation set apart for them, are a much stronger and less civilized people than the Pueblos, and yet they cannot be called a warlike race, though they are nomadic and marauding in their habits. They manufacture a superior quality of blanket, and own vast herds of stock, principally sheep and cattle, but very little farming. They number some 15,000 and have about 4,000 warriors.

Here we have contrasted the remnants of two powerful tribes of Indians who have submitted to the inevitable encroachment of civilization. One has tilled the soil and done it well, as their pretty little farms perfectly irrigated attest, and the other nomadic and nomadic, but very little farming. They manufacture a superior quality of blanket, and own vast herds of stock, principally sheep and cattle, but very little farming. They number some 15,000 and have about 4,000 warriors.

There is another class, though, of Indians, the "Red Indians," who correspond with the outcasts of the white race. The dreaded Apaches! They are only a few hundred in number, but they are brave. With their lives in their hands they are more than a match for all the troops that the United States can send against them. They are more than a match for all the troops that the United States can send against them.

These three tribes represent the three elements of the Indian race as they are found in the United States—civilized, semi-civilized and barbarous—but with the exception of occasional outbreaks among the Northwest Indians and the Apaches, the term "semi-civilized" may safely be applied to two-thirds of the Indians now in existence, and the remaining third be termed civilized.

The most potent factor in the civilization of these savages have been the church and the school; not among the Indians in their tribal relations so much as in the schools established by the government. In which have been placed the children and the young men and women taken from the reservation and sent to the industrial schools, and they have accommodations for only one-third of the Indian children of the Northwest and the Southwest of the number are as yet in the custody of the schools.

set with fine ash trees. The three old buildings are perfectly plain and unpretentious, not an elaborate structure, either interior or exterior. In the three old buildings are the offices of the superintendent and assistants, the dormitories, the dining room and kitchen and school-rooms. The dormitories are long, low-ceilinged rooms, with hard pine floors, and the walls are kept scrupulously clean. Each room has two, four, six or more beds, made of clean mattress and white spread, and pretty home-made covers adorn the floor. On the walls are bits of ornamentation in the shape of brightly colored pictures and fancy work, and the little citizens, their mothers and the like show a love and taste for the beautiful, and all this is the handiwork of the Indian girls.

The dining room lies in the basement of the south building. It is an immense apartment, in which the nearly four hundred pupils eat at one time. The large boys by themselves, the smaller boys by themselves and the girls in the center of the room sit together. They are neat and orderly as a promiscuous lot of boys ever are, and the girls, almost without exception, would be at home at any well-appointed table. Before being seated they sing in unison, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," and sing it with a hearty good will.

The school rooms are fitted up exactly as are the school rooms for white children, with plain polished desks, good blackboards and comfortable chairs. The desks are arranged in the quarters are a little cramped. On the blackboards are texts in good plain chirography, showing the love for the study of the scriptures, and the strength of the boys' and girls' hearts. Some of the boys' and girls' hearts are filled with Indian curiosities of every description, nearly all the work of the tribes represented by the children in the school.

At 9:30 o'clock each morning the pupils march into the chapel by twos—and they march well and engage in devotional exercises consisting of a short reading from the scriptures, prayer, and singing. They sing remarkably well. Some of the boys' and girls' hearts are filled with Indian curiosities of every description, nearly all the work of the tribes represented by the children in the school.

From the chapel they adjourn to the vast schoolroom. This part of the work is under the supervision and immediate care of Prof. J. P. Morrison, who is principal of the educational department. He is a young man of sterling integrity and fully alive to the responsibility resting upon him. His strict attention to the needs and necessities of the pupils and teachers, and his unvarying perseverance and energy, have made him invaluable aid in the training of these young minds. In his efforts he has had the confidence and support of Col. Leonard, who has been able to seconded by Harvey B. Teasdale, assistant in charge of the school.

It is sometimes quite difficult to get these Indian children to do their school work. The branches taught in the school are reading, writing, geography, grammar, spelling, history, arithmetic, drawing and music. The teachers employed in the various departments are Miss Della Rotford of Connecticut, Mary Reilly, New York; Ella G. Moore, Pennsylvania; Gertrude McGill, Kansas; Anna G. Egan, New York; Margaret A. Frank, Kansas, and Mrs. Ellen W. A. Blake, with Maggie, a Navajo, and a Navajo instructor in music, and the degree of proficiency which the pupils have attained is ample evidence of her fitness for the position. The amount of money annually expended in salaries is $30,000.

There are 128 pupils in the school, representing thirty-two tribes, as follows: Apache, Arapaho, Cheyenne, Comanche, Kiowa, Creek, Delaware, Cherokee, Osage, Pawnee, Potawatomi, Quapaw, Seneca, Shawnee, Sioux, Seminole, and others. The children of the Cheyenne tribe predominate, there being 50 of that tribe now enrolled.

substantial work it is, too, under the form-manship of J. S. Cannon.

In the harness shop, of which Geo. E. Dove is foreman, some handsome work is done, and a good many sets of harness made entirely by the Indians. The boys are waiting an order from the government to buy a new harness for the territory to be distributed among the Indians. One of the boys, a Navajo, has been made a harness maker by a Shawnee Indian boy of 14.

The farm and garden are tended by boys who are agriculturally inclined. Besides these industries there is a bake-shop, where Indian bread is made, and a broom-making shop, and they also learn carpentry, tailoring, shoemaking and painting. The children are closely observed, and if they develop talent or taste for any particular line of work they are put at that particular thing. If not they are experienced with until they display some preference.

Although the impression has gained credence that Indians are careless for amusements, such is not the case. They are, in general, a merry lot. Beside their hand, which makes excellent music, they have a base ball team which comes off victor in all contests, even with a picked nine from the Kansas University. They give little dances and amateur theatricals, and very entertaining concerts, in which the prima donnas are handed on and off the stage with the grace of a Chatterbox.

These boys and girls taken in infancy from their people, educated and trained as white children are, trained, given trades and professions by which they can earn a honest living, treated as human beings rather than objects, and restrained from going back to their old life. It is represented as an act of justice, and it is a noble one. It is a noble one. It is a noble one. It is a noble one.

THE HENDRICKS MONUMENT.

A Splendid Memorial to the Dead Statesman to Be Unveiled at Indianapolis on July 4.

The statue of the late Thomas A. Hendricks, which is to be unveiled on July 4 in Indianapolis, is a remarkable work of art and a superb superstructure for the monument now in course of erection.

The work has been two years in progress, $50,000 having been subscribed and paid in to defray its cost. The sculptor is R. H. Parks, and the result of his work is more than satisfactory. The statue is of bronze, fourteen and a half feet high, and cast in a single piece. Figures of History and Justice adorn the pedestal. The process of wax modeling in a single piece is an ancient art, lost three centuries ago, and only rediscovered within a generation. Now it is only practiced at the Royal Foundry in Rome, where this statue was cast, and at a foundry in Florence. The clay model for the statue was completed 33,000 pounds, and the statue weighs more than twice as much.

On each side of the monument is a globe. That in front bears the only inscription on the monument—the single word "Hendricks." Chiseled in the stone, and finished with gold leaf, below the name is a wreath of oak and laurel leaves nearly three feet in diameter. It was cast at the Royal Foundry in Rome, where modeling is carried to the perfection of art, and where it is not uncommon to use natural leaves or flowers as models. This particular wreath was exhibited in Paris, where a gold medal was awarded it, and where Mr. Parks bought it for the decoration of this monument. Above the niche which is thus adorned is a United States shield in bronze, with a spray of laurel falling across it.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 22, 1890.

THE "POST-DISPATCH" CENSUS.

It Proves That the Recent Enumeration in St. Louis Was a Ridiculous Farce.

Individuals, Families, Houses and Whole Blocks Missed in Some Sections of the City.

Names and Addresses of Thousands of Persons Who Were Missed Furnish an Argument Against the Accuracy of the Alleged Census, Which No Amount of Explanations by the Supervisor Will Answer Satisfactorily to the Wronged Citizens of St. Louis—Some Sample Cases, Showing How the Census Was Taken in This City.

THE citizens of St. Louis have two more days in which to send in their names to the census taker, and the time for closing the count has been extended to Tuesday. The census taker, however, is not to be taken in by the extension. The census taker, however, is not to be taken in by the extension. The census taker, however, is not to be taken in by the extension.

Not even Supervisor Weigel himself has ventured to assert that the figures in his office represent the total population of St. Louis or anything like it. When attention was first called to the omissions Mr. Weigel asserted that very few had been made, and stated that it would be unfair to judge of the results for the census was "complete." It is now "complete" inasmuch as the enumerators appointed by him have turned in their lists, but even the Supervisor now sees that the count is complete only in this sense, and in no way adequately represents the population.

THE INADEQUACY ADMITTED. Not even Supervisor Weigel himself has ventured to assert that the figures in his office represent the total population of St. Louis or anything like it. When attention was first called to the omissions Mr. Weigel asserted that very few had been made, and stated that it would be unfair to judge of the results for the census was "complete." It is now "complete" inasmuch as the enumerators appointed by him have turned in their lists, but even the Supervisor now sees that the count is complete only in this sense, and in no way adequately represents the population.

THE THOUSANDS OF NAMES. Of those omitted were sent to the Post-Dispatch in response to the general request that all who had not been visited would report, and in many instances the names were sent in with addresses and numbers in each family, and in some cases the names were sent in with addresses and numbers in each family, and in some cases the names were sent in with addresses and numbers in each family.

THE ONLY HOPE. For a proper census in an entirely new manner, conducted by efficient men under intelligent management. The system of mustering employees by the principal business houses and those who have large numbers of workmen in their service has shown how very large a proportion of the count in the more densely populated parts of the city, in nearly every instance the mustered workmen, especially those living in the tenement districts, have been overlooked by the enumerators.

THE NECESSITY FOR A RECOUNT. It is clearly apparent that the census taken by the Mercantile Club, and afterwards more fully discussed at the meeting of the committee appointed to devise means for having the census properly taken. All deprecated asking that a new census be taken if such a course could be avoided, and a careful survey of the situation was made with the intention of endeavoring to secure a proper count under the proper system. So plainly were the inaccuracies and so hopeless was the confusion that this idea had to be abandoned as impracticable and an appeal was made to the authorities at Washington asking for a recount. The following dispatch was received yesterday afternoon:

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21, 1890. Mr. H. Hayes, Chairman Mercantile Club Census Committee: Application made this morning for a recount of the population of St. Louis. The matter is awaiting the return of Mr. Porter, who will be here Monday. The recount will undoubtedly be made.

Some of the Citizens Who Have Been Missed by the Enumerators. There seems no limit to the number of complaints of omissions, as a glance through the following extraordinary list will show. Complaints are being received by mail, telephone and messenger, and many call themselves to ask why they were left out.

Down Town Houses Ignored. POST-DISPATCH blanks were left at a number of large stores for the purpose of finding out how many of the employees of the establishments had been overlooked. From the following named stores the list which is appended was obtained: Hudson, Nugent, Frank Bros., Crawford's and Barr's. John Heesch, 4331 John avenue; six persons. Mrs. Kate Funke, 1007 O'Fallon street; two persons. Fred Wallenhorst, 1122 Monroe street; two persons. Mrs. E. Kramer, 2813 North Ninth street; two persons. Hartwig, 1311 Montgomery street; two persons. August Hoffman, 1408 North Ninth street; two persons. Herman Puse, 2823 North Twelfth street; three persons. Mrs. C. Koepfer, 4035 North Twenty-fifth street; seven persons. William Duwell, 218 Benton street; four persons. Mrs. L. Grate, 2108 North Thirteenth street; two persons. Burton Bolton, three squares west of Greer avenue; four persons. Albert Heiser, 1804 North Market street; one person. Frank Cushing, 3129 North Thirteenth street; three persons. Jacob Meyer, 3118 Florissant street; seven persons. James W. Barklay, 900 Chambers street; one person. Hermann Beck, 819 Taylor street; five persons. E. Klante, 2537 Wright street; six persons. R. Dornkamp, 1411 Morrison street; five persons. J. McClain, 1439 North Eighth street; four persons.

Another Evidence of "Completeness." The Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co. made a careful census of their employees yesterday, with the result of finding that all the following were missed: Adair, F., 1221 Cornwood, Mo. Bruce, J., 1113 North Tenth street. Heuch, F. O., 1117 Locust street; two in family. Harris, Little, 495 Lucky street. Concanough, Josie, 2117 Warren street.

Mr. Frank Deming of the firm of Lee-Deming is one of the St. Louisans whose name will not appear in the census list, and the explanation he gives why he was not enumerated is sufficient in itself to show what absurd instructions the enumerators must have had, or at least what a mistakes impression they received of their duty. When the census man called at Mr. Deming's residence, 3800 Finney avenue, he saw Mrs. Deming. While he was playing his piano, she came to the door and asked him to call on her. He then answered in the affirmative. He then said he couldn't "take" him. Mrs. Deming protested and said that her husband had only gone to Mexico, Mo., on business and would be back in a few days. The census man, however, said that did not make any difference, that he could not take him.

Mr. Deming's wife had been returned to the city, and this morning that he had been living in the neighborhood where he resides at present for five years and was born in St. Louis.

The Percentage of Corrections. The Post-Dispatch has published the names of several hundred who have been added or corrected, and the balance could be used for the same purpose. The enumerators would of course be at work on the day before they started taking the names. But I don't really say what it would be for the census without thinking it over. Don't say I said these things were my own or that I was more or less. I don't wish to put it too large Albert Buser, 1512 Hebert street, five persons. Walter G. Poston, 2517 North Elliott avenue; three persons. John Welsh, 1812 Cass avenue. Wm. G. Chappell, 37 Olive street. John A. Lord, 301 North Sixth street. Edward McLoughlin, 1119 North Seventh street. C. M. Stark, 3214 Lucas avenue. Edward Pomeroy, 312 Walnut street. J. Seymour, 1102 North Eleventh street; three persons. Richard Woddlington, 114 North Fourth street; three persons. R. E. Ruchy, 2009 Page avenue; six persons. R. E. Lagrove, 1407 Washington avenue; one person. C. P. Walker, 1409 Washington avenue; one person. W. W. Lowe, Eleventh and Pine street; three persons. Byron Nugent, 3702 Delmar avenue; six persons. Henry James Dale, 1820 Washington avenue. Thirty-one Short. The Henry Gais & Sons Manufacturing Co. report that the following are anxious to go on the census, but have been overlooked by an enumerator. The list will be a record so as to give them a chance: Paul M. Lowe, 1715 North Eleventh street; six persons. George Donnelly, 912 Clinton street; five persons. Cornelius Barrett, 1330 Cass avenue; three persons. Thos. H. Evans, 1921 North Thirteenth street; three persons. Thos. H. Evans, 1921 North Thirteenth street; three persons. Wm. Cassidy, 813 Clinton street; one person. A. W. Anderson, 928 North Fifteenth street; one person. Schurmer, 2603 North Second street; three persons.

Determined to Have a Count. Mr. C. P. Carman of 1516 La Salle street has not been visited by an enumerator. He has lived in St. Louis forty years and is satisfied that he is a native-born citizen. He has time to spare, and he has decided to do his own thing, work for the Water-Pierce Oil Co., and found that the following had been missed before June 1: C. P. Carman, 1516 La Salle street; four persons. M. Berg, 2113 Butler street; six persons. G. Foster, 1811 O'Fallon street; six persons. C. P. Carman, 1516 La Salle street; six persons. Nick Reuter, 2009 Morgan street; one person. Ernest Cherninski, 1313 Russell avenue; one person. P. C. Upton, 1011 South Thirteenth street; seven persons. T. Becken, 2238 Randolph street.
